Should Finance join the pilot?

Finance wants access. You are the pilot owner. Expand only if every critical eval passes and at least 18 of 20 independently audited answers have support. Otherwise keep Finance in shadow: a person reviews each recommendation before acting.

How many requests received a rating?

Week A: 18 positive out of 20 rated, from 100 requests.

Week B: 10 positive out of 10 rated, from 100 requests. The other 90 week-B requests tell us nothing about satisfaction. Check the independent audit before advising Finance.

Read a sample outside the feedback inbox

Independent reviewers supported 18 of 20 sampled answers in week A and 14 of 20 in week B. Use both denominators. What can you decide with these samples, and what would you investigate next?

Follow one complaint all the way back

Product Data owns F04. Keep the failed reply in the review record. Have a reviewer approve the aggregate-only rule, then test the original request and one with a different synthetic ID. Close F04 only if neither reply repeats an identifier. The rollout decision still depends on the full audit.

Give the operating decision a name and a date

Pick the team allowed to use this version. Name the person who can pause it, the previous version they would restore and the date of the next audit. List every critical failure that still blocks expansion.

Show a colleague what you built

Start a fresh conversation. Show one approved metric, one decision you challenged and one correction that changed a later answer. Everything you need to keep working is in the course GitHub repository.
